Imagine you come home to a blasting TV. of gun shots and bad language. As you walk in your sons room you notice that his friend has brought this awful game. The next day he gets in trouble at school. Because he pretends his hand is a fake gun and shot his teacher and its all down hill from there. All of this because of a bad game he played with his friend. Now I persuade all of you parents to band your kids from playing video games so this doesnt happen.

A main reason I persuade you parents to do this is because video games can effect kids school work. Think about it at school your kids wont worry about multiplying or reading they want to come home and play video games. Also if they have a handheld video game device they might sneak and play it at school. Lastly they might stay up all night playing video games and fall asleep in class. Now I think no parent would want this to happen.

Another reason is because video games can waste your childhood. Your only a kid once do you really want to use that time playing video games? When your kid could go swimming or ride bikes on a warm summer day but they play gta5 instead it would be really sad. NOT to mention all of the energy they have that they wont have when they are older and they will regret playing video games. If you are a good parent you wont let this happen.
