

An additional reason why is that it is unhealthy. Your kids would never have any interest in exercising or playing any sports because all they would want to do all day is sit on their fanny's and play their video games. It is also unhealthy mentally too. When they went to school all they would do is think about playing their video games. If all they do is think about playing video games then they don't pay attention. If they don't pay attention they could get a poor grade.

I know that some people would say that video games are good for you because it could be a good stress reliever. I understand that they would say that because you get to shoot stuff so that could relieve some stress but I think that is not very healthy because when they get older they could have stress so they could go out in the real world and start shooting people because it is good stress relief. Instead of doing that couldn't they just go outside and get some exercise.

I think that children should not be exposed to violent video games because they could become an addict, be exposed to inappropriate content, and be very unhealthy. I wouldn't
